k. Military History Coordinating Committee

“(1)(c) Director, U.S. Army Military History Institute (MHI). The institute is assigned to the U.S. Army War College and maintains a historical collection to facilitate and encourage the official and unofficial use and study of military history. The MHI acquires military history related holdings and serves as the Army’s central repository for non-record copies of historical materials. Holdings include books, manuals, periodicals, manuscripts, reports, diaries, personal files and correspondence, documents, photographs, tapes, and other non-

What are the Issues?

- What can I take with me when I leave the office?

- (1) All personal and private files that do not contain references to official business.
- (2) Personal diaries, logs, notes, memoranda, tapes, disks, and summaries of telephone conversations, if all official information has been duplicated in official memoranda for record for retention in the official files.
- (3) Reference books and other personal items brought from private life, and

What are the Issues? (cont'd)

(4) Reference files consisting of extra copies of records that I drafted, reviewed, or otherwise acted upon while in office, provided they do not:

(a) Diminish the official records of the agency.

(b) Violate national security or confidentiality required by privacy or other interests protected by law.

(c) Exceed normal administrative costs

What are the Issues? (cont'd)

□ What can't I take with me when I leave the office?

- (1) The official record copy of any document.
- (2) Security classified documents.
- (3) Restricted or formerly restricted data documents.
- (4) Diaries containing official schedules of meetings, appointments, field trips, or other official activities.
- (5) Copies of records containing information exempted from public release under the nine exemptions of the Freedom of Information Act (AR 25-55) or Privacy Act (AR 340-21).

What are the Issues? (cont'd)

- (6) Any record, including any normally non-record copy, whose absence creates a gap in the files or impairs the logical sequence of essential documentation.
- (7) Records needed to transact the official business of the Army and any document which assists in the decision making process.

What are the Issues? (cont'd)

- What should I do if the distinction between personal or agency records is not clear?

Decisions for determining which records will be incorporated into agency files, transferred to the U.S. Army Military History Institute, or removed from Army control are sometimes difficult. In those instances, these decisions should be coordinated with legal counsel, records officers, or other designated officials within the agency.

What can I do Now?

- ❑ Avoid mixing personal files pertaining to private matters with official records by separating and controlling them at the time of creation.
- ❑ Obtain administrative approval to accumulate extra copies of work for reference convenience when needed.
- ❑ Prior to departing an agency, senior officials should contact the MHI for assistance in donating their personal collections.

Personal File Collections at the MHI

- The MHI holds the files of over 400 Army General Officers. The files range in age from the 18th century to present, the majority of which are from Generals that served during or after World War II.
- No other institution or combination of institutions have as much material as the MHI on the Army's senior leadership. General Officer files are among the MHI's most significant and most extensively used holdings.
- Personal file collections from Army Chiefs of Staff and Combatant/MACOM Commanders include: Generals Abrams, Bradley, Franks, H.K. Johnson, Reimer, Schoomaker, Shinseki, Starry, Sullivan, Thurman, Vuono, Westmoreland, Wickham,

MHI Services

- Assist and advise you and your staff with any questions about transferring materials to MHI.
- Pickup materials from your location.
- Provide postage-free mailing labels.
- Screen your collection for classified, personal/privacy information to ensure that materials being released are cleared.
- Maintain the collection in your name for generations to use when leaving the Army.

Summary

- ❑ All official records are subject to life cycle management procedures and are the property of the federal government, not the military member or employee making or receiving them.
- ❑ Since no person acquires a proprietary interest in any official documentation by virtue of his/her military or civilian position, decisions for determining which records may be removed from Army control are best made by the agency rather than the individual.
- ❑ The Records Disposal Act specifies that records of the U.S. government may not be removed or destroyed except as provided under the act and none of its provisions permit agency officials to remove records.
